“Missing Aunt Ro, who over the years filled roles as my sister, a confidant and after my mother and her sister Albina died, a “second” mother. Thinking about her – I thought of her hands, and how they were so graceful and always, always beautifully groomed, as she was. I thought about some of the ways she used her hands throughout her life and they tell the story of a life well lived. Her hands cared for babies and children; planted flowers around her homes; prepared thousands of meals for her family, in restaurants and in schools; soothed the sick; and her touch eased my mother at the time of her death. We all die, but when we lose a person like Rosemary, I think of John Gunther’s memoir “Death Be Not Proud”. I am heartbroken that she is gone from my world. Her niece

“This makes me so sad but when I think back on all the laughs we had at the Londonderry I have to smile. Ro was kind, loyal and as funny as they come. Our sides would split we would laugh so hard. Family was everything to Ro and I am happy to say I was a part of that for the time I worked at the restaurant. Larry, Kristen, Steve and Michelle I hope all of your memories of Ro sustain you through the difficult days ahead. I am praying for you. God speed. Hug Marie for me.

“ My memories of Aunt Ro always centered around laughter. Her laughter and our laughter. She had a way of making everyone around her laugh hysterically. From stories she would tell like only Aunt Ro could, from her iconic family member imitations to imitating comedians we used to watch together. Some of those imitations lasted for my lifetime. I still sometimes do my own rendition of them, to this day, and they still make me laugh.
Her larger than life personality will always be with me.
Sing it with me! : “I don’t care, I don’t care. No one’s laughing at my jokes and I don’t care...”
I love you Aunt Ro. Heaven is having a little more fun now.
Love, Paulie
